

Training Title: Creating Trust in the Workplace

Training Organization: Six and a Half Consulting

Description:	For organizations to thrive, all levels of an organization must feel psychologically safe, have some degree of autonomy, and be relationally connected with their co-workers. Participant managers will develop the leadership skills to respond to situations appropriately so that all employees can grow in a culture of learning. These skills are the bonds that glue a culture together.
Defined Instructional Objectives:	Participants will develop an understanding of how to personally manage their own trustworthiness as well as how to strengthen relationships within the three circles of trust for setting expectations on what they require in order to maintain trust and engagement as a member of a successful team. Participants will understand what can erode and both positively and negatively impact trust within a workplace and will learn how to proactively participate in repairing lost or broken trust including how to deliver an apology to speed the rebuilding process.
